An Artful Past

Some of the world's most distinguished paintings and sculptures have been produced by Dutch-speaking artists. Housing the second-largest collection of Vincent van Gogh paintings (after the Van Gogh Museum), the Kröller-Müller Museum in the Netherlands holds an impressive assortment of stunning art. The museum was founded by avid art collector Helene Kröller-Müller, who is credited as being among the first to recognize van Gogh's artistic genius. Stroll through the museum's striking sculpture garden, which unites art, nature and architecture.

Visit Michelangelo's iconic "Virgin and Child" marble sculpture within the medieval Church of Our Lady in Bruges, Belgium. At the Gothic St. Bavo's Cathedral in Ghent, see Hubert and Jan van Eyck's "Adoration of the Mystic Lamb" altarpiece — considered the world's first major oil painting and the most frequently stolen artwork of all time. Finish your creative journey in Delft, the city that artist Johannes Vermeer — creator of a painting called "View of Delft" — called home. Visit the Royal Porcelain Fles workshop here and see how the famed blue and white Delftware is specially made.

Keukenhof Gardens

Known around the world as the “Garden of Europe,” Keukenhof is a breathtaking tapestry of color and fragrance when its more than 1,000 floral varieties reach full bloom between mid-April and early May. Meticulously landscaped with tranquil ponds, placid streams and winding, tree-shaded paths, this vibrantly hued oasis originally formed part of the Teylingen Castle estate, where the early 15th-century Countess Jacoba of Bavaria tended an herb and vegetable garden. The landscapes of Keukenhof (translating to “kitchen garden”) were re-designed in 1857 by Jan David Zocher (known for Amsterdam’s Vondelpark) and his son Louis Paul Zocher, paving the way for the gardens we see today. In 1949, leading flower-bulb growers and exporters created the plan to use the estate to exhibit spring-flowering tulips. The park was an instant success when it opened to the public in 1950, drawing in 236,000 visitors during the first year alone. The nearly 500-acre Keukenhof has since developed into a world-famous showplace of bulbs adored by many anthophile visitors every year.
